Langham Partnership's Vision

Our vision is to see Majority World churches being equipped for mission and growing to maturity through the ministry of Christian leaders and pastors who sincerely believe, diligently study, faithfully expound and relevantly apply the Word of God through:

- Preaching
- Literature
- Scholars

Have you considered including Langham Partnership in your will?

Like many mission organisations we can benefit greatly when friends make a final gift that continues to bless the ministries they have generously supported in life. Once you have made proper and primary provision for family and friends this can be a very effective way to go on making a difference to the church on earth when you have joined the church in glory! If you would like to consider this option in your will please let us know and we will send you a helpful legacy leaflet. Contact Ian Buchanan, whose details are on the side panel.

It's like the New Testament church happening in our day

In this issue you will read about some remarkable church growth in North India. People are coming to faith in Jesus because he answers prayer. People are healed, the gospel is heard, sins are forgiven, the word spreads, and small groups of believers begin to meet in remote villages. And who is going to lead and pastor these new churches? Usually the first few people who came to faith in Christ themselves and shared the gospel with others. Just as in the book of Acts, such new church leaders are very young believers, needing to learn how to understand the Bible and teach it to others, so that the church will grow not just in numbers but in maturity in Christ.

So how can such teaching work be done? Again, just as in the New Testament, it can happen through personal visits and patient teaching – as Paul did with the leaders of new churches he planted on every missionary journey. It can happen through writing down the teaching they need, to strengthen their understanding of the scriptures and teach them how to live out their new identity as followers of Jesus – as Paul did through his letters. And it can happen through training and deploying people with stronger backgrounds and thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, so that they become higher-level teachers of the wider church – like Timothy and Apollos.

I hope you will be thrilled to see all of those New Testament elements in our lead story, and all of them embodied in the ministries of Langham Partnership. It is based on interviews with Langham Scholar Finny Philip, just a few weeks ago. Like many other church leaders in North India, Finny testifies to the amazing things that God is doing in that country. It is God who is growing his church there, to the surprise and joy of many who have struggled for generations and seen so little fruit in those teeming regions. It is the vision of Langham Partnership – in all three programmes working together – to strengthen and deepen that growth in every possible way. It is your privilege and ours to work together in supporting that vision.

A problem worth celebrating

Finny Philip is a man with a problem. His church in North India is growing so fast he can hardly keep up with what God is doing.

Finny is a Langham Scholar and is now the Principal of the Filadelfia Bible College in Udaipur in the state of Rajasthan. Filadelfia is also the name of his denomination, and before he came to Durham to study for his doctorate in the New Testament, it had around 700 churches. When he returned home in 2003, it had grown to 1,000 churches. Now, there are some 1,400 churches in that one denomination, spread across some 18 states, mostly in the North of India, where for many long years Christians have been a tiny minority in the great sea of the Hindi belt. Finny reports that in one particular region, where 20 years ago Christians would have been pulled off buses and beaten up and persecuted, now every third

■ Finny Philip

■ Rice for all those on the premises.

home in some villages includes believers. And this has resulted in all kinds of other transformations, socially and economically.

Training village preachers

A few years ago, villager Seva Bhai came to faith in Christ through the miraculous healing of his wife. "If God can do this for my family," he said, "I must share this good news in nearby villages." So he did, and now he leads three congregations with more than 70 believers in each. But that creates another problem. "What do you do on Sundays when they meet?" Finny asked Seva, "Well, I can sing, and I pray, and I try to read a little bit of the Bible," he replied – among people who are mostly illiterate. How can Seva and many like him be helped to feed new believers with good Bible teaching?

So Finny now meets regularly in remote villages with groups of simple pastors, sometimes up to 40 at a time for 3 days, teaching them the Bible, and teaching them how to preach it. From this base, Finny and several other Langham Scholars in North India are now working with Langham Preaching to extend this ministry in much greater breadth and depth.

Training the next level of trainers

But Finny cannot train all those new pastors alone. He has a passion for training and equipping a whole new generation of church leaders. Filadelfia Bible College does exactly that – and it too is growing. Built to house 100 students, last year 130 turned up, so they turned some classrooms into dormitories. 'The seminary had always been training church planters, evangelists and pastors,' said Finny, 'but that was not going to be enough to sustain the work. Church growth is so fast and the lack of resources in the Hindi belt made it difficult to train enough people.' So recently he has put a priority on training some to a higher level so that Hindi-speaking church leaders could produce their own materials, do their own training of others, and thus equip the church much more effectively. So the seminary now has a strategy of transferring the lower level programmes to regional training centres where the Masters level students can teach them, while the seminary itself focuses on the BTS and MD level programmes.

'I want to flood North India with Christian literature in Hindi'

That's another of Finny's dreams, and he is working to make it a reality. He has started a publishing company, in partnership with Langham Literature, aiming to develop Hindi Christian writers who can bring Bible teaching and theology down to the level of ordinary people, relevant to their social and cultural needs, and so foster practical Christian living. Finny wants to see Christians living the life of the kingdom of God in society, going into business, being active in society and politics. But that needs people to have good resources, relevant literature, and academically qualified leaders who understand the needs and are people of integrity and scholarship in their own fields. Finny himself is one of the senior editors of the South Asia Bible Commentary – one of Langham Literature's major one-volume commentary projects – combining his own

■ Their Library

■ The main building

Filadelfia children's homes. Finny tells how in the past 25 years children from these homes have been properly educated, mentored in their spiritual life and have gone on to be pastors, teachers, nurses, etc. They return to their churches and bless them and society there with their leadership. One of the young people has become a pastor as well as taking care of one of the children's homes and is now being sought after by the local council to give advice on major social issues.

So – Langham Scholar, doing Preaching training, and producing Literature – Finny Philip embodies all three Langham programs in one person. The problem he faces is a good problem – a fast growing church in a tough place like North India. Langham's investment in Finny is bearing abundant fruit in helping to make that growth healthy and long-lasting.

'We need Langham to go on standing with us,' says Finny, 'and to stir us again with vision. Langham has invested in my life and in my family's life. It has a wonderfully creative vision. We want to see our friendship and fellowship continue so that we can pray for one another and encourage one another. We want to be accountable for our own mission and to let God take the glory.'

1500 children are being looked after across North India in biblical scholarship with other Langham Scholars to produce something that will serve thousands of pastors in the whole region.

Opportunity and equality through education

But what's the point of producing books if people can't read them? Literacy in many villages in North India is 30% or less. So Finny and his denomination have been instrumental in setting up schools and children's homes. The school in Udaipur now has 780 students from Kindergarten to Year 12. One of the aims of the school is to provide the best quality education for children from all sections of society. The principle of Christian equality is promoted amongst the students who come from the lowest castes in villages through to the highest levels of society.

Passion and Enthusiasm as South Asia Bible Commentary reaches its half-way mark

Jessica Richard is the project co-coordinator and copy editor. Every part of this project has to pass through her hands. Please pray especially for Jessica. She has a young child, and over the past year, she has endured flooding, serious illness and financial stress. Pray for protection for her and her family.

The members of the South Asia Bible Commentary team are filled with thanks and awe at the way God has been leading this project. We have had our fair amount of hiccups, but great has been God's faithfulness. We are now around the half way mark in the project time-line and the editorial and advisory board has just met in Colombo, Sri Lanka, from 9–10 February 2010.

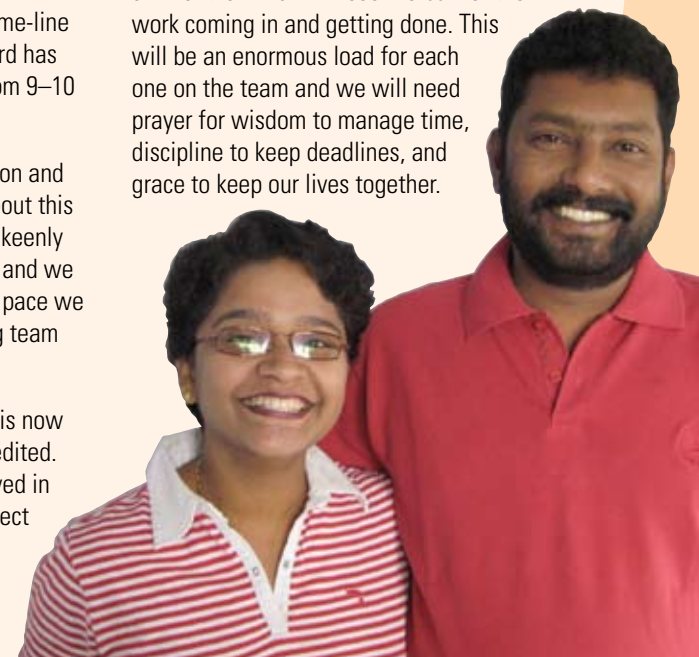

We were encouraged by the passion and enthusiasm each of us still feel about this project. The editorial team is now keenly aware of where we are as a team and we also have a good indication of the pace we need the SABC writing and editing team to work.

Thirty-five percent of the material is now available in draft form and being edited. The bulk of the work will be received in the next six months, when we expect to receive all full drafts of articles and smaller commentaries. A few of the commentaries on larger books of the Bible are also expected in full.

Hard work ahead!

We need prayer especially for the next six months which will see the bulk of the work coming in and getting done. This will be an enormous load for each one on the team and we will need prayer for wisdom to manage time, discipline to keep deadlines, and grace to keep our lives together.

■ Jessica and her husband Richard

Paul Windsor, Associate Director, Langham Preaching writes about the work of Langham Preaching in India.

Filling in the gaps, Langham Preaching assists with training the trainers in India

In a manner similar to the European community, India is a region marked by multiple states, diverse cultures, and many languages. And yet this all occurs within the boundaries of just the one country - which happens to have a population far greater than all of Europe. The needs and opportunities in India are immense and Langham Preaching is beginning to respond to them.

In North India the decision was made to hold a series of Consultations hosted by three Langham Scholars: Paul Swarup, Finny Phillip, and Paulson Pulikottil. The first two Consultations were held in September 2008 and September 2009. Twenty people gathered from Rajasthan in the West to Assam in the East – each with an active commitment to training Bible teachers. Much of the conversation focused on the needs of Uttar Pradesh which, if it were a country, would be the seventh most populous country in the world. As people listened and encouraged and networked with each other, remarkable stories emerged. The Schools of Biblical Teaching (SBTs) spreading throughout the North; the detailed and finely-tuned strategy to reach all of Uttar Pradesh, district by district, by the Doon Bible College and the UP Mission; and the Ministry Training Network (MTN) drawing together eight non-formal approaches to training Bible teachers operating in North India.

Co-operating with national training schemes

Unlike most other regions of the world it is clear that Langham Preaching's role in North India is to assist with the training of the trainers because there are already these numerous grassroots training initiatives in place. And so it was decided that Langham Preaching would convene a third Consultation in September 2011. The net will be spread a little wider and we will meet for a little longer as we wrestle with the issues that kept emerging at the earlier Consultations. Things like balancing the need to train Bible teachers for both the mainline, urban, and literate churches as well as the emerging, rural, and semi-literate ones. Alternatively, what about the role which biblical exposition has not just in terms of ministry within the church – but also the mission beyond the church? The issues are many and varied. Then as people listen and talk with each other it becomes possible to audit the 'gaps and overlaps' in the training options which exist and begin to fill those gaps and reduce those overlaps.

It was just such an informal audit that is now leading to a different approach by Langham Preaching in North-East India, that region which comprises the seven Indian states 'on the other side of Bangladesh'. Again it is a Langham Scholar, A. K. Lama, who is taking the initiative to partner with Langham Preaching. In his role as General Secretary of the Council of Baptist Churches in North East India (CBCNEI), 'AK' is working with Paul Windsor (Associate Director, Langham Preaching) to conduct a "line-up" meeting with a view to commencing the Langham Preaching training programme in the North-East. Key leaders from across the denominations plan to attend this meeting on 29-30 March 2010 with the hope that Langham's Level 1-3 training will be able to start early in 2011.

■ Paul Swarup, Langham Scholar and Chair of the Regional Council for South Asia

Stronger in the South

South India presents another range of challenges, partly because the church has a longer history and a wider presence in this part of India. At this stage it is unclear how Langham Preaching will serve the churches of the South. However the first conversation on the topic has been planned. Paul Windsor travels to Bangalore to speak at the Graduation Ceremony of the South Asia Institute of Advanced Christian Studies (SAIACS) and will have a meeting on 28 March 2010 with those in the Bangalore area who are interested in the work of Langham Preaching.

Whichever way the work in the South turns, the commitment to work together with Langham Scholars and to be flexible in the way we meet the diverse challenge which is India will continue.

Susan Matthews is a Langham Scholar studying for a PhD in New Testament at Durham University and hoping to return to teach in a seminary in India later this year. She shares with us a project she hopes to develop when she returns home, which grows out of her own experience.

Caring for someone special

It all began with our own experience

Our son Jyothish (pron. Jow-dhish means 'light') was born 5 weeks premature and was eventually diagnosed with cerebral palsy. When we look back at the difficult years we have passed through, often we wonder about the source of strength we received to face those challenging years – it is nothing less than the GRACE OF GOD.

We understand the tensions, hardships, problems of parents and pain of the children and believe God would like us to be instrumental in reaching out and helping parents who encounter similar problems in raising a child with CP. We want to help these children attain a level of independence to lead a life comparable to that of a normal child.

Magnitude of problem and the current Scenario in India

There are an estimated 2.5 million children and people in India with CP, making it the most common cause of disability. Although areas of India have a good track record for education, special education has not been given a proper focus. Awareness of the high incidence of CP and of remedial measures to alleviate the suffering of children and their parents is small with little recognition of the need to integrate such children into mainstream life.

■ Susan Matthews (left) with her family.

■ Deepti Centre for Children with Cerebral Palsy

We want to empower the children and their families to attain a physically, spiritually, socially, psychologically and economically productive life. Our challenges are enormous, needs are huge and goals are great. However, we believe God will help us reach that goal.

Deepti: Centre for Children with Cerebral Palsy, Kerala, India

The outcome of my visit to India with a team of volunteers from the UK is that a centre for children with CP was started in August 2009 in Kerala, India. Now eighteen children are registered in the centre and receive free physiotherapy and parents receive counselling.

There is a toy library as well, which enhances the children's physical as well as cognitive development.

Our next goal is to begin a special school in June 2010, in partnership with Villa Real School, Consett, Durham, integrating Conductive Education (which is an educational system that has been specifically developed for children and adults who have neurological motor disorders) with the national educational syllabus in Kerala. A team of teachers and teaching assistants from Villa Real will visit Kerala to help us in setting up the special school from July 30th to August 12th 2010.

God fulfils His plans and purposes in the lives of His children. When we surrender our lives to God's will, He helps us and He will turn the impossible into the possible. Nothing is impossible with God. As the Apostle Paul says, 'Being confident of this, that he who began a good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus'. (Phil 1:6)

Mark Hunt, International Operations Director, LPI, writes about a significant double meeting in South Asia.

Langham in Lanka

Sri Lanka played host to a significant double meeting of Langham Partnership colleagues from the South Asia region in February. The location made it easy for people from Pakistan and India to attend, as well as Nepal and Sri Lanka itself

A book worth waiting for

For the first two days, the team of editors of the South Asia Bible Commentary met. Like the Africa Bible Commentary (published in 2006, now in three languages with more on the way and selling by thousands), this is to be a one-volume commentary on the whole Bible by some 80 evangelical contributors from the region, many of them Langham Scholars. The populations of South Asia and their dominant religions are overwhelming, but surprisingly the number of Christians who will benefit from this project exceeds 50 million. The editorial board wants the Langham Partnership International logo to be used on the book because Langham is held in high regard among all segments of the church in South Asia. Please pray for all the writers, editors and publisher of this huge project – especially Jessica Richard, the managing editor in India. They hope to complete by September 2012.

"Blokos Worth Watching"

The second meeting in Colombo was the Langham Partnership Regional Council for South Asia. We have ten such councils around the world, meeting with senior Langham staff, for mutual sharing of news and to gain strategic advice for our programme operation in different countries in each region. There is no substitute for such face-to-face interaction with local leaders every few years.

A highlight of this meeting was working together on a five-year plan to create an "apex institution" in each country in the region with resources for post-graduate training. These institutions would then become centres for training faculty from other colleges. There was also a desire to develop a list of "Blokos Worth Watching", a concept John Stott borrowed years ago from the Australian Paul White. That is, they want to identify and mentor potential leaders from early on in their ministry, so that by the time they might be applying for Langham Scholarships, we know their character and ministry commitment as well as their academic ability ("blokos" in this context including women as well as men!).

Being hosted by Sri Lanka, which has only recently found peace after years of conflict, and continues to struggle with issues of ethnic divisions and human rights, made us all keen to go on praying for the church leaders in that beautiful island.

Are you able to join the board as a Trustee?

We are looking for two or three people with:

Faith

committed evangelical faith (in any denomination) with a heart for mission;

Skills/experience

in any of our three programmes – publishing, teaching of preaching, supervision of scholars;

in HR, marketing, law, etc; of living in the majority world;

Availability

we meet for two evening meetings a year in London and for one 24 hour residential - and opportunity for further involvement.

The current board is mostly white, male and 'of a certain age'. We would love to achieve a better balance of age, gender and ethnicity.

If this is an area of ministry that you could consider please ask for more details from our Chairman, David Cansdale - chairuk@langhampartnership.org.
